

IGNITE 2019!

Sparking new ideas for WHI science and impact

Aging.....

Staying active

Cognitive changes

Shopping, cooking, healthy eating

Medical news/ caregiving

Multiple medications

Home safety - aging in place

The Women's Health Initiative

- Has made key contributions to the evidence base for healthy aging in women
 - Policy
 - Clinical practice
-
- High impact

What else can WHI ignite?

IGNITE!

Modification of the home environment for aging in place

Daniel Beavers, PhD
Associate Professor, Biostatistical Sciences
Wake Forest School of Medicine

Aging and cancer: an analysis of shared attributes of aging and cancer in the Women's Health Initiative

Pinkal Desai, MD, MPH
Assistant Professor of Medicine
Weill Cornell Medical College
Assistant Attending Physician, New York Presbyterian Hospital

Determining how vision and hearing affect health and aging

Emily W Gower, PhD
Associate Professor, Gillings School of Global Public Health
University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

IGNITE!

Subjective cognitive impairment: opportunities for using the cognitive change index in WHI

Kate Hayden, PhD

Associate Professor, Public Health Sciences

Wake Forest School of Medicine

Prospective study on metabolic predictors of healthy aging in older women

Michael LaMonte, PhD, MPH

Research Associate Professor, Department of Epidemiology & Environmental Health

University at Buffalo

Body composition prediction in WHI: development and validation, and association with disease

Hailey R. Banack, PhD

Research Assistant Professor, Department of Epidemiology & Environmental Health

University at Buffalo